Review: Multi-faceted public health campaign with the aim to reduce the harms associated with the supply and consumption of alcohol. Provides up-to-date statistics and TV and radio campaigns, including high-profile campaigns targeted towards young people, pregnant women, parents, drivers and Indigenous people living in metro, rural or remote areas. Resources for teachers, health professionals, policy personnel, parents and students are easily accessible from desktop and mobile devices. Easy-to-use, interactive apps to check standard drink serving sizes and an evidence-based risk assessment tool provide consumers, and those concerned about the drinking patterns of others, with discreet ways to ensure safer drinking environments and behaviours.

Review: Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples experiences of loss are multifaceted and complex, and involve the 'normal' losses that individuals experience as well as other losses that are specific to Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people. Professionals working with traumatised youth can access research and resources that provide a focus on historical and cultural ways of dealing with loss while balancing best practice principles. Positive mental health for all generations is paramount to healthy minds, bodies, families and communities.
