5 out of 5 stars

Australia Creator: National Drug Research Institute (NDRI) - Curtin University Last reviewed: 21/02/2019

Review: A nationally coordinated project aimed at tracking and reporting trends in alcohol-related harm in Australia at national, state and local levels. The NAIP has identified 5 major indicators of alcohol related harm: alcohol-attributable mortality and morbidity, alcohol related road crashes, self-reported patterns of drinking, per capita alcohol consumption and alcohol-related violence. Free access to statistical bulletins and reports that have been published. Excellent site and resources for professionals and academics concerned with policy, health promotion, harm reduction, prevention and early intervention strategies to support Indigenous communities, or impacts of dependence and addiction.

Review: Residential, outreach, education and aftercare programs for Indigenous Australians. The programs are culturally sensitive and aim to reduce harm from alcohol and other substances. All participants must commit to strict lifestyle habits while participating in the residential and day rehab options. Programs and services also address family violence, anger management, families and relationships, financial management, healthy lifestyles, career pathways, aftercare/outreach (including remote community visitations to follow up on graduated clients), and drug & alcohol education and awareness programs in Top End schools and community groups. Note: This is a review of the provider's website and the information on it, not a review of the quality of their services.
