Review: Analysis and outcomes from the Monitoring the Future research project, a longitudinal study which began in 1975 of the behaviours, attitudes and values of American secondary school students, college students and young adults. Data from this combination annual and longitudinal study provides an excellent snapshot of changing alcohol and other drug use patterns amongst young people and society. The link to this site could be a valuable 'favourite' for professionals involved in monitoring social trends and developing community health policy. Also provides interesting data for teachers and youth workers. Access to all published research results, press releases and peer reviewed journal articles.
